A SNOB'S GUIDE

The Ultimate New York City Steakhouse Glossary

New Yorkers are snobby about a lot of things—what they wear, what they read, what they listen to, and most importantly what they eat and drink. Please see the coffee snob, the pizza snob, the cocktail snob, the sushi snob. And here now, for the people who don't know what the hell they're talking about, some primers. Welcome to A Snob's Guide.

Porter House: The steakhouse in the Time Warner Center from former Windows on the World chef Michael Lomonaco. The restaurant serves several premium steaks, but also "porterhouse" cuts of other meats like lamb and duck. Skip those and head straight for the chili-rubbed ribeye, which is aged for 45 days.
